In the spring of 2009 your foundation received a stack of photocopied letters courtesy of Director Leon Oakley and his friend Ron Moores, who explained that one John Lemna of Orlando, Florida “had come across the letters at a jazz festival somewhere in New England. The letters had been found on a table with a sign saying ‘free take one.’” Copies were also passed on to the editor of “Just Jazz” in England. They bore the letterhead of the Hot Jazz Society of San Francisco in 1947 and 1948. We have been able to discover little about that organization, although its fifteen listed sponsors do include some familiar names from various walks of life: Rudi Blesh, Harry Bridges, Bill Colburn, Hal McIntyre.

Such stuff is perfectly suited to the legend and mystery that continue to swirl around the writer of the letters -- Bunk Johnson.

A well known New Orleans trumpeter and bandleader in the early 20th century, Bunk was a pioneer in helping transition late instrumental ragtime into classic jazz. Acting on a conversation with New Orleans-born Louis Armstrong, who had revered such mentors as Bunk and cornetist King Oliver, historian William Russell rediscovered Bunk in 1939 in rural Louisiana.

At that point fresh interest in the original, small-band forms of jazz was beginning to bubble up worldwide. Russell and others got Bunk playing again and arranged visits and gigs around the U.S., which included a recording session with members of the Yerba Buena band in San Francisco. SFTJF’s Emeritus Director Charles Campbell met and heard Bunk in Los Angeles during World War II; contrary to the delicate, dance-like impression many people got from Johnson’s recordings, the musically astute Campbell declares, “Bunk was the most powerful trumpet player I ever heard.”

In 2000 two British-born aficionados, Mike Hazeldine and Barry Martyn, published an exhaustively researched book, Bunk Johnson, Song of the Wanderer. Highly recommended, it is available from Amazon or direct from Jazzology Press, 1206 Decatur Street, New Orleans, LA 70116. Hazeldine and Martyn evidently had access to the letters we have received, or at least to the facts referred to therein.

However, the mystery of the letterhead persists. It includes a photo of Louis with Bunk, announcing, with exaggeration, the former as student and the latter as teacher.

Note: The following is an excerpt from a 1998 article by our former board member, the late Phil Elwood, in the San Francisco Examiner:

“In ’39-’40 the Hot Jazz Society of San Francisco, a group dominated (at first) by argumentative record collectors, met regularly in a former Annie Street speakeasy called the Dawn Club. Like the Hot Club of France which met in a Paris bistro, the S.F. Hot Jazz Society (after a few meetings) made live music a part of its agenda.

After listening one meeting to Saunders King, a fine amplified guitarist who sang like Nat “King” Cole, and his “modern swing” unit, and the next month to Lu Watters and his traditional New Orleans-style Yerba Buena Jazz Band, the Hot Jazz Society membership opted for the Watters band, who soon got a regular weekend gig at the Dawn Club making a few records before the wartime draft snagged most of them.”

now about the check that you sent to me, that was real great David for me to receive it, because we didn't have any money at all, an things at the present are real dead here with us, because we cannot get any work here at all, so that just keeps our mind all up set, to be at home an no work, an I am a man that do need a job of some kind.

so the position that I am in at this present, I just cannot get in my mind to start writing a book, because my mind is all up set about my expense's here to live off, an every thing is real expensive for every one these late days, for a man that have a family to take care of.

so as soon as I can get a job of some kind, I will start to write a big book all about my whole life, now David my great friend, to write a book, a man's mind must be all settled an he is at ease, an nothing to worry about at all, then he can have good luck in writing that book an the book will come out real good. so I hope that you do understand me, because a man cannot have to many things in his mind when he would like to do one great thing, so will you look in to that, an you will find out that what I'm saying is the right thing about writing a book or anything els.

now Dave I am also thanking you an Marilyn, for your great help that I receive from you all a few days ago, an we will always remember a real friend, an that is you an Marilyn, an I want to say Dave, that I'm praying that your letter to John Schenck, it will open up his heart an he will change be a real man like you, an send me some money of some kind because I trusted him, an I thought that he was a real fine man like you, an he had a word an that he would do, just what he said he would do an that was to pay me every thing that he ow'd me, so it is all up to him he is the man with the money, now I am in hopes that he will do so im medi ately, because he is the one that is got me in this position to day, by keeping me in chicago three long months.

so I will close my great friend, an will be looking forward to hear from you an Marilyn, real soon again my real great friends, so good luck a good day to you all, an please write me an Maud real soon again,

Yours Sincerely,
Old Man Bunk,
Dear David,

I just wanted to let you know what happened to Bunt today. About noon, he was at the typewriter, writing a letter when he fell out and couldn't call.

What came over me just as I heard the typewriter fell, and when I went to see he couldn't talk, he wasn't stiff, but he is talking now. So I done the best I knew at the time was to call a Doctor, and the Doc said his blood was high and it was like a light stroke. Please don't mention about the light stroke because I don't want him to worry.

He said he really sorry you are so far from him, knowing that you would give me a great help in the little of money, if possible. So please send me...
Page 1 of the letter of December 18, 1948. Bunk is getting worse and he and Maude’s situation is pretty desperate.

Dear Dave & Marilyn,
just these few lines to let you know that I had to rush Bunk to the hospital last. They have to put him on Oxygen because his wind was so short.
Now Dave I couldn’t send him to a charity hospital because he is out of town and Bunk couldn’t of made the trip.
Now I don’t know how many days Bunk will be in the hospital and don’t know how every thing will turn out.
So I won’t be glad if you could send me what you are able to send and help me out with hospital expense.

Page 2 of the letter of December 18, 1948. “Now Dave Bunk is in a severe condition.”

Now Dave Bunk is in a severe condition.
I am trying to do my very best with Bunk. So there for the hospital is the last place.
I wish you all a many Xmas and a happy New Year.
Sincerely,
Maude Johnson

BUNK JOHNSON, 69, TRUMPET PLAYER
Jazz Stylist Who Began in New Orleans Dies --- Featured at 2 Town Hall Concerts

William Gary (Bunk) Johnson, noted Negro trumpet player, died on Thursday in his home in New Iberia, La., according to word received here last night by friends. He would have been 70 years old on Sept. 24.

Bunk Johnson was a legendary figure in jazz. He started playing the French horn as a schoolboy in New Orleans, where his mother, Theresa, ran a Creole lunch room. He played first with Adam Oliviter’s band. The other players followed the score, but Bunk was unable to read, and he soon switched to Buddy Bolden’s band, where it was all improvisation and ear. In those days the competition between bands was so keen that during Mardi Gras and parades, they would drown each other out. Bunk was considered the originator of the New Orleans style of jazz trumpet playing.

He played continuously except for two interludes -- the Spanish-American and the first World Wars -- in both of which he served as an Army bandmaster overseas. Then, in 1931, he lost his teeth. He took to working in the rice fields and doing other odd jobs. Shortly before the outbreak of the recent war he was “rediscovered” by William Russell, who arranged to provide him with a set of store teeth. Bunk began again as a trumpet player and achieved greater fame than the first time.

He starred in a jazz concert in San Francisco, and then came to New York, where he made a series of records with his band for Victor, Decca and other leading record firms. In 1945, at the age of 65, he was band leader at the Stuyvesant Casino, Second Avenue and Ninth Street. He was lionized by the younger generation of jazz enthusiasts, and articles about him appeared in The New Yorker, Collier’s and other publications.

In 1946 Bunk Johnson and his New Orleans Band were the featured principals of a jazz concert at the Town Hall here. He played his favorites, “New Orleans Street Parade” and “Maryland, My Maryland.” In 1947 he was again featured at Town Hall, under the auspices of the New York Jazz Club.

He was the teacher of Louis Armstrong, trumpet virtuoso.

Surviving is his widow, Maude. They had twelve children, eleven of whom were living in 1945, and ten grandchildren.

About Your New
San Francisco Traditional Jazz Foundation

Created as a non-profit in 1981, the San Francisco Traditional Jazz Foundation stated, as its primary mission, the archival preservation of thousands of items related to the West Coast Jazz Revival that began in San Francisco about 1939. In 2009 SFTJF completed the transfer of the main body of those materials to the Stanford University’s Music Library. Thereupon, your Foundation’s Archive was closed; possible donors of jazz materials should now contact Stanford or other public repositories.

SFTJF’s wider, ongoing aim is to help foster high-quality traditional jazz, regionally and worldwide. That mission is now carried out primarily via electronic media. The Foundation’s main window on the world is our website -- www.sftradjazz.org -- where visitors are invited to become members at $25 per year.

Benefits of membership include insider information and discounts to special events and products, and a subscription to our lively newsletter, the Cricket, now available electronically. Those wishing to continue receiving the Cricket on paper in the mail should please contact the SFTJF office manager.

Thank you for your generous support over the years. Contributions in categories beyond the basic membership level are tax deductible, and the names of those contributors are published annually (unless a contributor specifies anonymity).
